Art Basel HK’s mega-draw

Asia’s biggest art fair brings on the bling with more than US$1 billion worth of valuable art by top galleries going on sale, reports HELMI YUSOF

"I love that I can finally own this masterpiece. It's not an investment, but something I love," she says. "It has a special meaning for me."

Lee, 25, is one of Singapore's most important contemporary artists. She started pursuing her passion for art at a young age, and her work has been showcased in numerous galleries around the world, including the Museum of Modern Art in New York.

"I’ve been collecting art for a few years. It’s a way to invest in something that I love," he says. "I find it fulfilling to be part of the art world and to support emerging talent."